the Shoobox Lab

WHERE YOUR BRICKS GO

The Shoobox Lab is a set of free, hands-on science kits for kids in grades 3 to 6. Randolph K. designed them as his Eagle Scout service project with Troop 313 in Arlington.

THREE PARTS, ONE BOX.

A project the child builds, a workbook the child can read alone, and a short guide for the adult beside them. Everything is in the box. Nothing to buy.

MADE TO BE GIVEN, NEVER SOLD.

Every kit goes free to a family through The Root Cellar, a community center in Lewiston, Maine, that serves immigrant and refugee families. Steps are shown in pictures and short videos, so a kit works while a child or parent is still learning English.

the Gravity Games car

WHAT YOUR BRICKS DO.

Each kit gets about 100 bricks and a set of build cards. Gravity Games builds a ramp and a car. Launch Lab builds a catapult and a brick wall to knock down. We wash, sort and count every brick. Kits will be packed and delivered this winter.
